DESCRIPTION

This course provides students with the various theoretical perspectives used in the study of family relationships across the life span. Substantive research issues provide a forum for students to actively engage in discussing the complexities of families in various sociocultural, economic, political contexts, to name a few.

OBJECTIVES

1. Build students' understanding of various theoretical perspectives on family relationships across the life span;
2. Examine a wide range of family and development issues;
3. Critically examine how various factors (individual, family, societal) may impact family relationships over time; and
4. Develop various dissemination of knowledge strategies to inform various stakeholders (peers, academia, and community).

COURSE READINGS

Course readings are listed in this syllabus by week.

Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association (6th ed.). (2010). Washington, DC: American Psychological Association.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS

Student Participation (20%)

There are two components to student participation.

Part 1 (15%). Students are expected to actively participate in all of the classes.

Part 2 (5%). Having a project/paper reviewed by peers is a very useful process which has two benefits: (1) students build their critical skills by reviewing their peers' work and providing relevant and positive feedback; and (2) when reviewing peers' work, students' own writing style should improve by self-reflection and learning from their peers. In groups of two, students will partner with a classmate and be the reviewer for each other. Students are encouraged to place comments on the project/paper itself. An Evaluation Form will be completed with formal comments to the submitter. The Evaluation Form and comments will be submitted with the final project/paper.

Students must bring the project/paper to the beginning of class on: NOVEMBER 14. The exchange of projects and papers will occur in class so that I can make sure that it is given on time.

Students must review the work by NOVEMBER 28 which will be given to their classmates at the beginning of class. Make sure that the Evaluation Form is also submitted.

The evaluation form and comments must be attached to the final project/paper for my review. DUE: December 10 at 12 PM, MINS 139.

Student Presentation (40%)

Presentation (30%). Students will choose a topic on the first day of class and be responsible for presenting the readings and other materials (peer-reviewed articles, websites, other sources of information) in class in consultation with the Professor. The presentation will take three forms:

Part 1. Students will present a critical review of ONE of the class readings, focusing on particular aspects of the reading that the students may find interesting, challenging, or needing more attention (weaknesses). Students will pose some questions to engage peers in discussions.

Part 2. It is important for students to be able to disseminate their knowledge to others. This is the part of the presentation where students should be creative, innovative, and fun! Using the class readings, along with at least three peer-reviewed academic journals, websites, and other sources of information, students should develop ways to disseminate the knowledge. For example, students can "develop" a 30 minute workshop, class activities, skits, or...? The "audience" can be for academics (students, faculty) or parents, youth, service providers.

Part 3. There should be 30 minutes reserved for questions from classmates and myself, and public feedback. This presentation should help students in formulating their ideas for the final project/paper.

It is strongly encouraged that students provide a one page "Fact sheet" on the information presented in class so that it will serve as a resource for students in the future.

Student Evaluation (5%). It is always a great opportunity to get feedback from your peers. After each class, students will anonymously complete an evaluation form which will be handed in to the Professor for calculation. Then the student will meet with the Professor to discuss the feedback.

Project/Paper (40%)

There are two options for the project/paper.

Option 1: Traditional paper. In consultation with the Professor, the student will individually write a paper on a topic of their choice that focuses on family relationships. The student must include a context for the topic (e.g., at-risk families, ethnic minority, gay, SES) which will demonstrate that the student is able to critically examine how family relationships must take into consideration individual and social factors. The paper should be at least 15 pages (no longer than 25), not including title page, references.

General criteria:

- All papers must be stapled, double-spaced, 12 font
- Follow APA, 6th edition (deductions for not following APA)
- References are required
- Papers will be graded based on both writing style and content

Option 2: Project. Along similar lines of the Presentations, Part 2, students will “create” a website with information that is based on empirical research, or a workshop. The website is not to be active on the internet. For the places of “hyperlinks”, students will provide the texts. This will be explained in class. Students should be as creative as possible. Students should include a summary of the purpose of the “website”, the intended audience, and references of all sourced materials. Students are strongly encouraged to consult with the Professor, especially if they have another innovative way of presenting the information.

General criteria:

- Reader accessibility of the information
- Organization, clarity, content, writing style as intended for the targeted population
- APA does not necessarily have to be followed on the “website” but references of the sources must be in APA
- The “amount of information” and effort should be similar to that of writing a paper
- If the project is on Powerpoint, provide a flash drive which will be returned after the semester

Due date: DECEMBER 10, 12:00 PM, MINS 139.
